The daughter of a perfectionist father and a moderately disorganized mother, Susan Fleischman found her “calling to organize” early in life.

“As a child, whenever my sister and I said we were bored, my mother directed us to kitchen cabinets, bureau drawers or closets that needed cleaning out,” explains Susan. Following the lead of her orderly father, Susan seized opportunities to purge, categorize and label the family’s belongings.

Susan’s talent for organizing blossomed at college, when she created a color-coded system for organizing class notes. While her classmates pulled all-nighters cramming for exams, Susan’s ability to quickly sort, analyze and file information earned her top grades—and plenty of time for sleep (and fun)!

Her keen sense of detail led to a successful 25-year career in public relations and marketing for prominent food and beverage industry clients.

With a reputation as a highly creative and thorough problem-solver, Susan has held senior executive positions at top national public relations agencies; founded a small boutique PR firm; and has thrived as an independent consultant. Over the years she’s trained dozens of professionals, and to this day, they all say Susan is the most organized person they know!

Subscribing to the “make your true passion your career” philosophy, Susan founded clutterfree® to help others benefit from having control over their stuff and time. While she and her team of experts take their work seriously, Susan’s down-to-earth nature and practical sense of humor makes getting organized easy and fun.

“Being organized has helped me reduce stress and save time and money in my own life,” she says. “I find it extremely rewarding to share my expertise with clutterfree clients and ultimately, help have them have more time and energy for life’s pleasures.”
